Introduction

Below is a list of consumer reporting companies updated for 2023.¹ Consumer reporting companies collect information and provide reports about you to other companies (users). These users buy these reports to inform decisions about providing you with credit, employment, residential rental housing, insurance, and in other decision-making situations. The list below includes the three largest nationwide consumer reporting companies and several others that focus on certain market areas, consumer segments, and types of users. This list is not intended to be all-inclusive, but there are many companies in it. We provide you with tips so you can determine which segments and companies might be important to you. This list also makes it easier for you to take advantage of your legal rights to (1) obtain the information in your consumer reports, and (2) dispute suspected inaccuracies in your reports with companies as needed.

Who can see your consumer reports?

Consumer reporting companies must follow legal restrictions, but generally can provide consumer reports and risk scores to an array of businesses, including:

- Lenders (including those that offer credit cards, home, payday, personal, title, auto including auto leasing, student loans, security deposit financing and lease guarantees on home rentals, and buy-now-pay-later \(BNPL\) products)
- Employers and volunteer organizations (pre-employment screening and on-going employee monitoring)
- Government agencies to determine eligibility for government assistance
- Landlords and residential real estate management companies for short- and long-term residential property rentals (tenant screening)
- Banks, credit unions, payment processors and retail stores that accept personal checks

¹ This list is current as of January 2023. It includes entities that have identified themselves as “consumer reporting agencies” (as that term is defined in the Fair Credit Reporting Act) or have indicated they provide consumers access to information they have collected about them. The list incorporates information from the companies’ own self-descriptions that has not been independently verified by the Bureau. This list does not cover every company in the industry. It is not intended to be all-inclusive. Nor does it reflect determinations as to whether any particular entity is subject to the Fair Credit Reporting Act. Furthermore, presence on, or absence from, this list does not indicate whether the consumer reporting company is subject to the Bureau’s supervisory or enforcement authority. To provide your suggested corrections or additions to the list, contact the Bureau at CFPB_CCPD2@cfpb.gov and include “Consumer Reporting Company List” in the subject line.

(check screening)

- Companies that market and sell certain products and services specifically to lower-income consumers and subprime credit applicants, such as companies providing short-term lending and rent-to-own lending businesses among others
- Debt buyers and debt collectors
- Insurance companies (health, life, property insurance screening)
- Telecommunication and utility companies (e.g., mobile phone, pay TV, electric, gas, water)
- Retail stores for product return fraud and abuse screening as well as retail stores that offer financing such as appliance and rent-to-own businesses, among others
- Gaming establishments and casinos that extend credit to consumers and/or accept personal checks

You can get rejected without warning

With the exception of employment screening, users of consumer reports generally do not warn you in advance if they are about to take an adverse action against you based in whole or in part on information in your consumer reports. In most instances, adverse action notifications are provided after the fact, say, when you have already been rejected for a loan, residential rental property, or auto lease. Or maybe you are approved, but with any number of costly conditions, such as being required to make a higher down payment (for example, on a home loan), or place a security deposit (for example, on a rental property or phone plan), or find a co-signer or guarantor who will be on-the-hook in the event you fail to meet your contractual obligations. The accuracy and completeness of your consumer reporting data, therefore, is extremely important.

The good news is that you have a meaningful role to play to help ensure your data are accurate and complete. As Figure 1 shows below, it's a three-step process: The first step is to request your consumer reports. The second step is to review your reports closely. The third step is to dispute suspected inaccuracies as needed. This introduction describes these steps in detail, and provides helpful information about how you can take greater control over your consumer reporting data.

Request: Get your report from the companies on this list (often for free)

Under the FCRA, all consumer reporting companies are required to provide you a copy of the information in your report if you request it and many do so for free. The bigger nationwide companies must provide you a free report no less than once every twelve months upon your request (and within fifteen days of receiving your request). As detailed below, you can request your data from the three largest nationwide consumer reporting companies on a weekly basis through December 2023. Your financial service providers might also provide you with free access to risk scores. Frequently – but not always – these are the same scores they use to manage their credit relationships with you.

Additionally, consumer reporting companies must give you a free copy of your information if you request it after an adverse action is taken against you (e.g., you are denied credit, employment, housing, or another benefit) based on information in your report from that company and under other specific circumstances. All consumer reporting companies must provide you with a copy of your information for a reasonable fee (for calendar year 2023, the maximum allowable fee is $14.50). Requesting copies of your own consumer reports does not hurt your credit scores.

Not every consumer reporting company will have information on every consumer. A reporting company that specializes in insurance claim data, for example, will likely not have information about you if you have never filed an insurance claim. Employment and tenant background check companies may not collect information about you until you have applied for a job or apartment, respectively. Also, some consumers with limited and/or out-of-date credit histories (sometimes known as “credit invisible” consumers) may not have enough information for credit reporting companies to have reports about them. You may be one of those consumers, although if you are making purchases using credit, or if you have credit that is delinquent and is being reported on your credit reports by a debt collector, it’s unlikely.

To order your report from a company listed below, click on the company link we provide. Some companies have separate forms for requests by postal mail. We provide links to those forms for you. Upon review of this list and the helpful web links in it, you might decide that exercising your free legal rights and taking advantage of free services are sufficient for your needs. Think carefully before you purchase paid credit monitoring. There are many different kinds of scores available in today's marketplace, and the credit scores and reports you buy or obtain from a third party website might not be the ones lenders use to make decisions about you.

Review: Know when to check a report

Fact-check your consumer credit reports from the three largest nationwide consumer reporting companies (Equifax, TransUnion, Experian) at least every twelve months to ensure they are accurate and complete, especially if you intend to rent, purchase a home or car with credit, or otherwise intend to apply for credit in the near future. In response to the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, you can now request your credit reports for free weekly from each of these companies through December 2023. There isn't just "one" credit score, so it's important to focus on the reporting information itself from which risk scores are derived. If you are applying for a job, home rental, or insurance policy, also fact-check your background screening reports to ensure there are no errors. We give you detailed tips on when and how to best check those reports in the sections below as appropriate.

Check your report if you suspect you have been a victim of identity theft. Look for accounts on your report that you don't recognize or names or addresses that don't belong to you. See also our resources to avoid pandemic related scams.

You should also consider blocking third-party access to your consumer reporting data through a security “freeze.” By freezing your consumer reports you can prevent fraudsters from opening new credit accounts in your name. Consumers reported losing more than $5.8 billion to fraud in 2021, an increase of more than 70 percent over the previous year.² Below we tell you which company websites offer additional information about your options to block third-party access to your consumer reporting data.

Finally, there are additional options to take greater control of your consumer reporting data. You can opt-out of consumer reporting companies sharing your data for credit and insurance direct marketing you might not want to receive. Conversely, there are some things to consider should you decide to share your financial data. There are also steps you can take to help keep your personal information secure. These steps may include enrolling in identity theft protection services. However, it’s important to understand the limits of identity theft protection services, and to consider the free alternatives described herein, by clicking on the hyperlinks we provide. The FTC provides additional resources on steps to take if you’re a victim of identity theft.

Dispute: You have the right to request corrections to your reports

If you find information in your consumer report that you believe is inaccurate or incomplete, you have the legal right to dispute the report’s content with the consumer reporting company and the company that provided the information to the reporting company, such as your lender. Under the FCRA, companies must conduct – free of charge – a reasonable investigation of your dispute. A company that has provided incorrect information must correct the error and notify all of the consumer reporting companies to whom it provided the inaccurate information.

Of course, if your information is current and accurate, even if negative, you will not be able to remove it. Some services may claim that they can remove negative information, “wash,” or even “sweep clean” your entire credit history, but if the information in your report is accurate and current – beware! – it’s probably a credit repair scam. Legitimate companies will never ask you to dispute accurate information or claim identity theft where none has occurred, or do these on your behalf.

You can learn more about disputing a reporting error on our website, including what to do if you see the same error in more than one report. You can also learn more about your rights to get adverse items removed from your consumer reports if you have been a victim of human trafficking.

We’re here if you have complaints about your consumer reports

You can also submit a complaint to us. We will forward your complaint to the company and work to get you a response. We handle consumer reporting complaints about report accuracy and completeness errors and other consumer reporting topics, including: if you are dissatisfied with a company’s investigation of an earlier dispute, if you believe your consumer report was used improperly, if you have problems getting access to your own consumer reports, and if you are dissatisfied with consumer reporting products and services provided to you, such as credit monitoring and identity protection services including security freeze, fraud alert and active duty alert requests. We also handle complaints about paid credit repair services. We help consumers connect with financial companies to understand issues, fix errors, and get direct responses about problems. You can submit complaints to the CFPB online or by calling (855) 411-2372.

Nationwide consumer reporting companies

Equifax, TransUnion, and Experian

These are the three big nationwide providers of consumer reports.

Equifax, TransUnion, and Experian reports contain:

- Personal information, such as your name, date of birth, name(s) of loan co-applicants, as well as current and past residential addresses, phone numbers and employer names.
- Information about your payment history as submitted by credit card companies, home and auto lenders (and leasing companies), and other creditors.
- How much credit you have and use.
- Information from debt collectors including unpaid medical debt that is greater than 365 days delinquent from date of service, and past-due debt from cable and phone bills.
- Some public information like bankruptcies.
- Inquiries from creditors who have requested your credit reports when you apply for credit.

Free report:

In response to COVID-19, you can now request your credit reports for free weekly from each of these companies through December 2023. Typically, each of these companies will provide one free credit report every 12 months if you request it. As a result of a 2019 settlement, all U.S. consumers may also request up to six free copies of their Equifax credit report during any twelve-month period through December 31, 2026. These free copies will be provided to you in addition to any free reports to which you are entitled under federal law.

AnnualCreditReport.com will route you to any of the three companies you select. Before giving you a copy of your report, each company will ask you a few detailed questions to authenticate your identity. These questions are designed to be those only you can answer. They might be questions asking you to verify information about an existing or closed loan. The question could ask you to identify a street address where you have never lived and you would respond that it was not an address where you lived. The purpose of these questions is to protect the security of your information.

If you run into difficulty getting your free Equifax, TransUnion, or Experian annual credit report(s) from AnnualCreditReport.com or its toll-free phone number provided above, try contacting the respective institution(s) directly for help:

- Equifax, (888) 378-4329. For reports in Spanish, choose Option 8 when calling or visit equifax.com.
- TransUnion, (833) 395-6938. For reports in Spanish, choose Option 2 when calling.
- Experian, (888) 397-3742

Freeze your report:

By law each of these companies must freeze and unfreeze your credit file upon request and must do so at no charge to you. You also can get a free freeze for your children who are under age 16. If you are someone's guardian, conservator or have a valid power of attorney, you can get a free freeze for that person, too. Below is each company's freeze contact information:

- Equifax, (888) 378-4329
- TransUnion, (833) 395-6938
- Experian, (888) 397-3742

For servicemembers: Equifax, TransUnion, and Experian will provide free credit monitoring services to active duty servicemembers and to National Guard members. You can request these services by visiting the active military web pages of each company:

- Equifax Active Military
- TransUnion Active Military
- Experian Active Military

Employment screening

Employment screening companies provide information such as credit history, employment, salary, and education and professional license verification to employers and others, including to non-profit volunteer organizations and to government agencies such as to verify employment income to determine eligibility for government assistance. They may also provide residential address history and Social Security Number verification; criminal arrest and conviction information, as well as fingerprint information from state and federal criminal record databases; status on global watchlists, motor vehicle and driver's record information; drug and alcohol testing and health screening information; and non-profit and volunteer activity verification. Employment screening can include both pre-employment screening and on-going workforce monitoring. Many employment screening companies won't have information on you unless you authorized an employer or other end-user to obtain a report. If possible, when you give your authorization, ask for the name(s) of the employment screening company being used. Contact those reporting companies to fact-check your reports. If the employer is checking your credit history in separate reports, from one or all three of the nationwide providers of consumer reports listed above, request and review those reports too.

Tenant screening

Tenant screening companies provide information such as credit history, eviction information, rental payment history, identity verification, income and employment verification, and criminal background data to landlords, property management companies, and others. A tenant screening report with negative information in it, such as prior housing evictions, could result in a rejected lease application, or it could result in approval of the application but with tough conditions inserted into the lease agreement such as a requirement that you pay months of additional rent in advance or a higher security deposit. Many tenant screening companies won't have information on you unless you apply for rental housing or otherwise authorize a landlord or property manager to obtain a report from them. However, you should check in advance for errors in your credit report, since a credit report is a common component of tenant screening reports. Additionally, if you are rejected as a tenant for a residential property, or “conditionally accepted” with certain adverse conditions such as requiring a co-signer or a larger deposit or a higher rent payment than other applicants, the landlord or management company must provide you with an adverse action notice that includes the name(s) of the consumer reporting company it used to screen you. Contact the screener(s) to fact-check your information and dispute suspected inaccuracies as needed. Errors in your tenant screening report shouldn't keep you from finding a place to call home. If a landlord refuses to rent to you or charges you more because of something in a background check, be sure to know your rights and protections.

Check and bank account screening

Banks and credit unions use check and bank screening reports to help decide whether to offer you a checking account or to cash your checks. For example, you may have negative information in your report if you had a checking account before and you have an unpaid negative balance on that account, such as from an overdraft that you have not repaid, if the account was closed by the bank, or if you were suspected of fraud related to the account. If you have been a victim of bank account and/or check-writing fraud, or have had prior difficulties opening or closing a bank account (such as being denied an account), review your check and bank screening report(s) and dispute them if inaccurate.
